WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Recent Improvements Reported to the War Department.

Albert Van der Naillen of this city has recently returned from an extended tour of Europe, during which he visited the principal universities and schools of mines and engineering. The Electro-Technical Institute Montefiore, of Liege, Belgium, he found of superior merit. There he studied telegraphy without wires, aiming at preventing collisions at sea during dense fogs.

By this method, Mr. Van der Naillen says, signals can be transmitted at sea a distance of thirty miles, and regular messages exchanged at seven miles, and disasters like the recent one of La Bourgogne and others can now be avoided. The latest improvement in wireless telegraphy is the confining of the electromagnetic undulations to certain angles, directing them to special points and excluding all others, thus making it possible to send a message at sea to certain vessels or forts, avoiding all intervening vessels or fortifications.

Upon the request of United States Consul Gilbert at Liege, Mr. Van der Naillen made a full report on the progress of wireless telegraphy, which has been forwarded by the Consul to the Navy and War departments.—S. F. Call.

Mars on a Jamboree.

Hawaii must be glad that it is a part of the United States. It must joy the heart of the islander to realize that the benign influence of a broadening civilization has taken him in, and that the armed men of a great republic are on the spot to shield him from all harm.

It is true that the armed men have not behaved with absolute propriety. They have prodded the innocent thoughtlessly with a patriotic bayonet, have raided private grounds, and latterly have indulged in a spree of magnitude. These incidents, however, are trifling.

Judged by a civilian code the officers, their scope of vision enlarged and possibly distorted by an overplus of alcohol, who declared Honolulu under martial law, should have been thrown into the calaboose, and the next day fined as common drunks. A different code may prevail in the army.

If the military authorities are at a loss as to how the offenders should be punished, let them consider the case reversed. Had a lot of citizens gone on a tear, insulted and assailed the troopers, clubbed them, used unseemly language having the distinct savor of vulgarity, indignation would run riot. Generals would have had conniption fits, messages would have been hurried to the Secretary of War, and serried ranks gone forth to belt manners into the criminals. With all respect for the soldiers, with a tendency to glory in their devotion and their worth, it must be admitted that there are times when their deportment incites to remarks not wholly laudatory.—S. F. Call.

For Governor of California.

The election for the State officers of California takes place on Tuesday, November 8th. The contest is between Henry T. Gage, a down-right, straightforward Republican, and Judge James G. Maguire, who has received his nomination from the Democrats, populists and others, and first came into public notoriety in the days of the Sandlots, but who, both as judge and congressman, has given satisfaction to his supporters. In order to ascertain to a limited extent the political views of the community in national politics, THE INDEPENDENT gives its readers the opportunity of voting for these candidates. Cut out and return to this office on or before 5 o'clock on November 8. The result will be announced in the issue of November 9th.
